Specialist Law Firm, Technology Law Alliance continues to power ahead in 2010.

The specialist technology law firm, Technology Law Alliance, continues to power ahead as we move into the last quarter of 2010, as confirmed by the recently released ratings provided by the premier legal directory, Legal 500. The Directory, which recognises the top law firms in the UK, comments that Technology Law Alliance “has a vibrant team that provides an exceptional service in terms of response times.” Praiseworthy comments are also included in respect of the co-founders of the firm, Stephen Ollerenshaw, who is described as ‘very entrepreneurial’, and Jagvinder Kang, who is highlighted for the fact that he ‘understands the language of IT,’ in view of his dual qualified status as a technology lawyer and software engineer.

The continued success of the firm has seen its Birmingham office ranked on par with local West Midlands heavyweights, such as Eversheds and Pinsent Masons.

The firm’s strength and depth in advising on billions of pounds worth of technology law transactions, is also recognised in the London market, where the Directory recognises its peers as being such world class law firms as Slaughter & May and Simmons & Simmons.

London Director, Jeremy Newton is described as a ‘very rounded and pragmatic individual’, and Gavin Wakefield is highlighted as being ‘extremely helpful’. The directory comments that the firm provides clients with a ‘very good service’, gives ‘practical, accessible advice’, and ‘always delivers in a very timely manner’.
